Still not sure?

Check The Apprenticeship Service - <https://accounts.manage-apprenticeships.service.gov.uk/>

Through the apprenticeship service on GOV.UK employers can plan and manage their apprenticeship programme, giving them greater control over their apprenticeships and account funds. The apprenticeship service is made up of the following:

- Estimate my apprenticeship funding allows employers to calculate whether they will pay the apprenticeship levy or not, and how much they will have available to spend on apprenticeships. It also shows all employers how much the government will contribute towards the cost of training.
- Find apprenticeship training gives employers easy-to-digest information on the choices available to them. They can easily search for and find a standard, framework and training provider, and compare one provider with another.
- Recruit an apprentice is a new platform through which training providers can post vacancies and manage applications for apprenticeships and traineeships. This will be opened up to employers at a later date.
- Find an apprenticeship and Find a traineeship are the recruitment sites that enable employers to advertise their vacancies for free and find candidates who match their criteria.
- Manage apprenticeships allows registered levy-paying employers to view their account balance, manage their apprentices and approve funds to pay for their apprenticeship training

Print Your Future

HELP IS AT HAND

As trade associations – Intergraf for Europe, and the BPIF for the UK – have a wealth of examples of companies and best practices that have been successful at finding, attracting, and keeping employees in the graphical sector. The aim of this toolkit is to share some of this knowledge and to help raise the profile and attractiveness of the whole industry.

Print Your Future

HOW TO

FIND

THE NEXT GENERATION

There are lots of places where you can search for new employees, including websites, trade federations, trade unions, schools, colleges, and universities, print fairs, and job fairs. Look around for relevant events in your area which could help you to reach your target group. Cast a wide net: look both within and outside of vocational education and training providers. And remember, people in both older and younger age groups may have the profile you need.

To attract younger generations, it is crucial that you look at engaging potential candidates from an early age. Young people often start making decisions about their careers very early, so try to let them know about the career options that print can offer, and what it's like to work in the industry. Opening up the conversation with young people and outlining the possible career paths is key.

Connecting and opening up to local schools, career advisors and organisations to raise the profile of your business within your community is important. Building these relationships is also a way in for recruitment promotion and raising the profile of the industry as a whole.

HOW TO

ATTRACT

THE NEXT GENERATION

To attract and retain talent, you need to build an employee-focused company culture. Today's workers demand a good work-life balance, clear career expectations and opportunities, and a value-driven environment. Ensuring that you are offering your current staff this kind of culture will help you to attract new people. One important tool that can help to build this culture is continuous communication and social dialogue in the company.

HOW TO

KEEP

THE NEXT GENERATION

Strict, hierarchical workplaces are a thing of the past. Interesting jobs and meaningful work matter more than they did. You need to make sure your workforce understands and is part of the bigger picture.

It's #NationalApprenticeshipWeek we wanted to give our current apprentice a well-deserved shout out. 🎉

Ben worked at ESP group for several months before recently enrolling onto our apprenticeship scheme to upskill and progress in his career in the printing industry. Working alongside both our team and with the support and guidance from BPIF Training Ben will be studying for 2 years to complete an NVQ in Print finishing.

We asked Ben a few questions:

- How are you finding your apprenticeship so far?
- Fun, earning whilst learning!
- What are you most looking forward to learning about?
- Hopefully getting to learn the ins and outs of all the machines.
- What do you hope to get out of your apprenticeship?
- To become a top operator that can run all machines at ESP.

We're thrilled to see Ben getting stuck into the programme and look forward to supporting him as he progresses his career with ESP. Good luck Ben!

someone who might be? Get in touch with Louise: Louise@espcolour.co.uk

"there are young people out there, they just need to be aware of our industry - this is the single biggest issue for the print industry"

The screenshot shows a LinkedIn post from BPIF Training, which has 796 followers and was edited 2 days ago. The post is titled "Calling out to the print industry" and mentions "National Apprenticeship Week 2022". It contains a poll asking for support for a roundtable discussion. The poll results show that 100% of the 20 votes were "Yes", and 0% were "No". There is a "2w left" timer and an "Undo" link.

"as an industry we need greater exposure to school aged children - the problem is that no careers officer ever said 'hey have you thought about being a printer'"

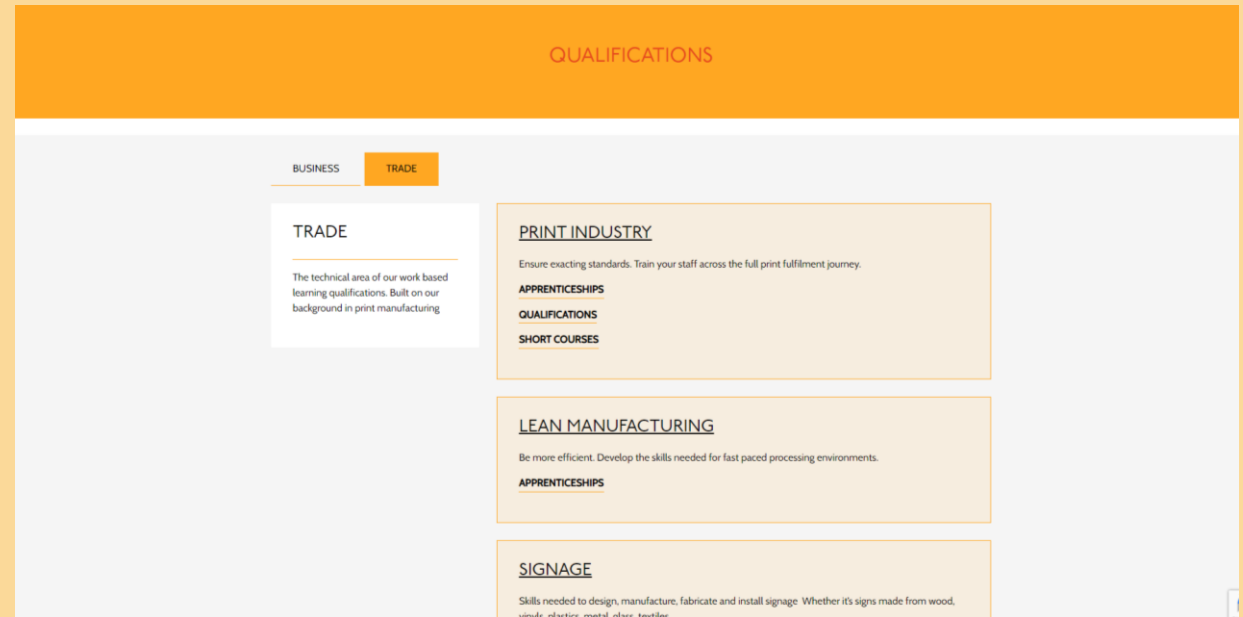

"we should be utilising industry experts and let people in education know there is a vast and interesting career path in print just waiting for them"

"I think with the array of incentives available to organisations, it should be something on the "to-do" list of every Managing Director in the print and packaging industry."
